No. 2:15-cv-09204-AB-MRW

PLAINTIFFS' OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANT TOYOTA
MOTOR SALES, U.S.A., INC.'S
REQUEST FOR JUDICIAL NOTICE

Date: June 27, 2016
Time: 10:00 a.m.
Place: Courtroom 4
Judge: Hon. André Birotte, Jr.

I. ARGUMENT

A party requesting judicial notice bears the burden to show that the documents in question are properly the subject of judicial notice. See Harris v. Gipson, 2015 WL 5999255, at *1 n.3 (C.D. Cal. July 21, 2015). Defendant Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (“Toyota”) requests that the Court take judicial notice of the contents of certain owner’s manual excerpts. Yet, for the reasons discussed below, Toyota fails to show that judicial notice is proper here.

A. Toyota Has Not Shown that the Contents of the Proffered Owner’s Manual Excerpts Are Beyond Reasonable Dispute Based on Their Source

Under Federal Rule of Evidence 201(b)(2), the court may judicially notice a fact that is “not subject to reasonable dispute” in that it “can be accurately and readily determined from sources whose accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned.” Fed. R. Evid. 201(b)(2); see also United States ex rel. Modglin v. DJO Global Inc., 48 F. Supp. 3d 1362, 1379 (C.D. Cal. 2014). As the Advisory Committee notes to Rule 201 state, “[a] high degree of indisputability is the essential prerequisite” for a court to take judicial notice of a particular fact. Fed. R. Evid. 201 (advisory committee notes) (emphasis added).

Plaintiffs in this case dispute that the cited owner’s manual excerpts come from sources whose accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned—and Toyota fails to show otherwise. A party with an interest in the outcome of a case “is not a source whose accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned.” Loumena v. Kennedy, 2015 WL 5963988, at *8 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 13, 2015); see also Turnacliiff v. Westly, 546 F.3d 1113, 1120 (9th Cir. 2008) (ruling that a former employee declarant “is not a source ‘whose accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned’”); Star Varga v. United Airlines, 2009 WL 2246208, at *5 (N.D. Cal. July 24, 2009). For the same reason, district courts are very reluctant to take judicial notice of materials linked to party websites, since they generally “are not the sorts of ‘sources whose accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned.’” Azco Biotech, Inc. v. Qiagen, 2013 WL 4500782, at *3 n.5 (S.D. Cal.

1 Aug. 20, 2013); see also Gerritsen v. Warner Bros. Entm't Inc., 112 F. Supp. 3d 1011,
 2 1030-31 (C.D. Cal. 2015) (same).

3 Here, too, it would be inappropriate to take judicial notice of the contents of the 4 proffered owner's manual excerpts simply because Toyota says that the manuals
 5 contain vehicle instructions or explain features, or that representative copies are 6 available on Toyota's website. In essence, Defendant—a party of interest in this
 7 case—cannot show that its own employee and website are sources whose accuracy
 8 cannot reasonably be questioned (and the Landis Declaration itself goes blatantly 9 beyond the bounds of judicial notice).¹ Accordingly, this Court should decline to take 10 judicial notice of the owner's manual excerpts submitted by Toyota.

11 B. Toyota Has Not Shown that the Proffered Owner's Manual Excerpts Have 12 Been Incorporated by Reference into the Operative Complaint

13 Under the doctrine of incorporation by reference, the Court may consider on a 14 Rule 12(b)(6) motion documents whose contents are alleged in the complaint, 15 “provided the complaint ‘necessarily relies’ on the documents or contents thereof, the 16 document’s authenticity is uncontested, and the document’s relevance is uncontested.”
 17 Perkins v. LinkedIn Corp., 53 F. Supp. 3d 1222, 1240 (N.D. Cal. 2014); see also 18 United States ex rel. Modglin, 48 F. Supp. 3d at 1383 (rejecting incorporation by 19 reference where relators’ claims did not rely on documents at issue). Stated another 20 way, district courts should not incorporate a document by reference unless it is 21 “integral” to the operative complaint and “there are no disputed issues as to the 22 document’s relevance.” Coto Settlement v. Eisenberg, 593 F.3d 1031, 1038 (9th Cir.

23 ¹ Toyota's case cites do not support their Request for Judicial Notice. In Rice v.
 24 Sunbeam Prods., 2013 WL 146270, at *6 n.1 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 7, 2013), the district 25 court granted judicial notice because the plaintiff had not objected to it and because 26 the plaintiff alleged claims based on the owner's manual at issue. In Gertz v. Toyota
 27 Motor Corp., 2011 WL 3681647, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 22, 2011), the plaintiffs 28 alleged a breach of warranty claim based on terms set forth in the owner's manual at issue. But here, Plaintiffs object to judicial notice, and importantly, Plaintiffs do not allege claims based on Toyota's owner's manuals. Furthermore, Toyota's employee declarant (Robert Landis) is an engineer who did not even attest that he created the manuals, revised them, used them for marketing purposes, or provided them to Plaintiffs.

2010) (emphasis added). “[T]he mere mention of the existence of a document is insufficient to incorporate the contents of a document.” Id.; see also United States v. Ritchie, 342 F.3d 903, 908-09 (9th Cir. 2003) (defendant’s petition to the DEA was not incorporated by reference where it was not referenced extensively and it was not integral to defendant’s claim).

Incorporation by reference is particularly inappropriate in a deceptive marketing case where the plaintiffs have not alleged that they were misled by the documents at issue, or even saw the documents, prior to purchasing the product. See Missud v. Oakland Coliseum Jt. Venture, 2013 WL 812428, at *11 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 5, 2013). In that case, the complaint does not necessarily rely on the documents and the documents are not integral to plaintiff’s claim. See id. (finding that the contents of defendant’s webpages were not centrally related to plaintiff’s claim for deceptive marketing where plaintiff neither alleged that he was misled by those webpages nor that he saw them prior to purchasing the concert tickets at issue).

Toyota contends that Plaintiffs have incorporated the cited owner’s manual excerpts by reference into the operative complaint “because Plaintiffs rely on the absence of certain disclosures and features in pleading their claims.” Toyota’s RJN at 3-4. Toyota is wrong. Plaintiffs do not refer to owner’s manuals in the operative complaint, and they certainly do not do so extensively.² The cited manuals are simply not integral to Plaintiffs’ claims, since Plaintiffs do not allege that they were misled by the manuals or even exposed to them before purchasing the Affected Vehicles. See Missud, 2013 WL 812428, at *11; see also Fraley v. Facebook, Inc., 830 F. Supp. 2d 785, 795 (N.D. Cal. 2011) (rejecting incorporation by reference of certain Help Center pages on Facebook since “it does not follow that a member would necessarily see the ² There are limited references to “pre-sale” materials in the operative complaint, by which Plaintiffs were not referring to owner’s manual materials. By definition, “owner’s” manuals are a reference tool for “owners”—not prospective purchasers. Common experience also confirms that a reasonable car purchaser does not review an owner’s manual prior to purchase.

1 other Help Center pages Facebook submits”). Consequently, the operative complaint
 2 does not necessarily rely on the manuals, and the Court should not consider such 3 materials on a motion to dismiss.

4 In any event, Plaintiffs dispute the relevance of the cited owner’s manuals. As 5 noted above, Plaintiffs do not even allege that they saw the cited owner’s manual
 6 materials before purchasing their Affected Vehicles. Furthermore, the owner’s
 7 manuals are not the sort of pre-sale marketing materials that Toyota used to induce 8 purchase of the Affected Vehicles.

9 In sum, incorporation by reference would be improper here because the 10 operative complaint does not necessarily rely on the owner’s manuals, the manuals are 11 not integral to Plaintiffs’ claims, and regardless, Plaintiffs dispute the relevance of the 12 owner’s manual excerpts at issue.

13 II. CONCLUSION

14 For the reasons set forth above, Plaintiffs respectfully request the Court to deny 15 Toyota’s request for judicial notice as to any owner’s manual excerpts (Exhibits 1-7).
